Holograph, much burnt, Supplied From Smith Ms. No. 68, Fol. 27, BODLEIAN LIBRARY. , (, The period at which the following series of letters commences is that of the contests between Mary and her father and his council, who long and vainly strove to induce her to acknowledge her own illegitimacy by surrendering the title of princess. At the period in question, this title was generally conceded to the lawful daughter of a king. It was enjoyed by all the daughters of Edward IV. The youngest of these, Catherine countess of Devon, always assumes this style in her official documents (some of which are still in existence) during the early part of Henry VIII. s reign. It was not, therefore, as has been sometimes supposed, merely because...
