Hydraulic fill 270,000 cu. yds. Miscellaneous fill 14,000 (b) Complete outlet structure by building spillway section, conduits and spill-way bridge. Concrete 2,500 (c) Build roadway across crest of dam with guard rail, etc. For season of 1922. Finish, dress and seed slopes of dam. Complete roadway and guard rails. Clean up and finish all work by June. Because of the complications due to railroad relocations, this original program was changed considerably before the dam was finished, but as far as the selection of equipment was concerned, the difference between the actual program and this preliminary one was not important. Excavation Plant. The excavation for the Huffman outlet structure presented problems very similar to those at Taylorsville. The excavation was in Cincinnati rock and amounted to 182,000 cu. yds. The bottom of the pit was all below river level, and at the deepest part of the stilling pool it extended to a depth of 38 feet below low water elevation. This work must be protected against river flooding as at Taylorsville, and the same problem of track grades for cofferdam or dike protection presented themselves, as at Taylorsville, in connection with steam shovel work. A dragline excavator loading into 12-yd. dump cars was selected for the excavation plant at Huffman for practically the same reasons as decided the question at Taylorsville. At Huffman, as at Germantown and Englewood, the most suitable material for hydraulic fill embankment was found in the...
